Determining Starting Salaries

Starting salaries for new employees are determined by referring to:

- Salaries/grades of present employees in related positions
- The salary range for the position being filled
- The individual's related education and job experience
- The individual's salary history

Promotions

Apple's goal is to compensate employees appropriately for performing work at higher skill and responsibility levels. Employees are eligible for promotions when they acquire higher skill levels and assume increased levels of responsibility significant enough to warrant a change to a higher pay level.
